SCHOOL SPIRIT PERSONIFIED

To one whose unfailing wit and unequalled fairness have commanded our admiration and love, whose classes provide entertainment as well as knowledge, whose able coaching has spurred our athletic endeavors to new heights, who has been responsible for our visual aids, taught us good sportsmanship and promoted leadership through the Student Council, the student body of Hickory High School dedicates this, the HICKORY LOC, to COACH GENE MILLER.

OUR SCHOOL BOARD

Seated: Dr. Walter Nau, E. M. Fennell, Otto Bowles, M. E. Rink, R. Glenn Abernethy.

Standing: Everette Eckard, Charles Howard, W. S. Hamilton.

The three main functions in which the Hickory School Board of Education has proved itself quite proficient are (1) giving guidance and direction in the administration of the Hickory school system, (2) making available the physical needs of the schools, and (3) maintaining an adequate teaching staff.

It is through the constant endeavors of the School Board that we now have Hickory High School's new addition, as well as the installation of electric fire alarm systems in all the Hickory city schools.

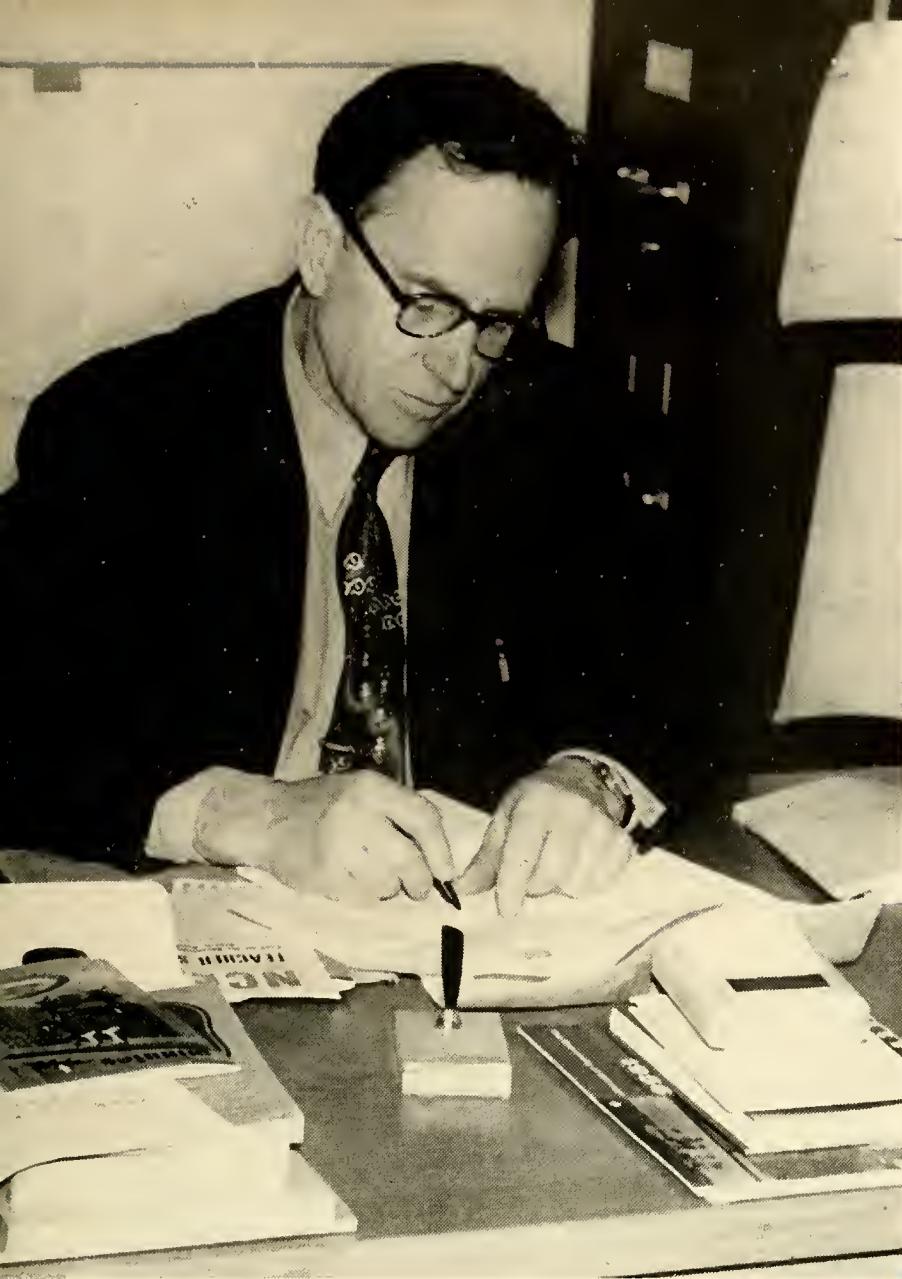

Mr. W. S. Hamilton

W. S. Hamilton, Superintendent of Hickory City Schools, has been working on the improvement program of the city schools. Under his capable leadership, all schools have been accredited by the Southern Association of Schools and Colleges.

A Duke University graduate, Mr. Hamilton was recently honored by being named a member of the White House Conference held in Washington, D. C.

Mrs. Helen Klasset industriously finishes a day's work by adding up a report for Mr. Hamilton.

Mr. W. D. Cottrell

The spirit of the school is a reflection of the spirit of our leaders. For twenty-three years, the enthusiasm and hard work of Mr. Cottrell, principal of Hickory High School, have united the faculty and students. He is so interested in each student that he is always ready to guide or direct him, patiently and knowingly.

"Genius at work" is certainly a fitting title for Eleanor Bechtel, for the qualities of a genius are required for the job of school secretary.

They are now ending their Year of Honor with all the excitement, fun, and work. Finishing research papers, themes, achievement tests, and projects for ever so many teachers, the seniors look back on these things and are now looking toward the future.

Seniors have so many things to do, as they must guide, organize, and advise the underclassmen as well as themselves. As seniors, they are looked upon by sophomores and juniors as symbols of three years of struggling with geomerty, chemistry, and English books. But underlying this is the fact that these seniors have done their part in adding to the history of Hickory High School. Their accomplishments in fields of journalism and athletics, as well as their scholastic achievements mark the class of 1956 as an outstanding one.

As seniors, they begin to take more specialized courses. Many students who have decided to go into the business world are found struggling with bookkeeping balance sheets. Many members of the senior class, by taking D.E. and D.O., leave school at lunch to work.

With the departure of the chemistry department to the new building, the students will miss the seniors and the foul odors they produced in the chemistry lab.

As well as added studies, the seniors have more extracurricular activities. They are more closely knit than they have been previously, since they are together so much in their various clubs. Log Staff, Twig Staff, Quill and Scroll—all of these clubs require hard work and time. Homecoming is a big day for seniors, for the senior football players and sponsors are honored at the half-time ceremonies, as well as the queen, who is usually a senior. Several honored seniors are included in the Senior Superlatives and Who's Who.

Although the seniors of 1956 are leaving H.H.S. with reluctance, they will be ". . . Hickory High School boys and girls" forever.

Mona Hudson seems tickled that her name appears in the graduating list.

Seniors Donald Finger and Terry Bishop try to decide on a future Alma Mater as they confer with a college representative on College Day.

Eddie Faires demonstrates his state award winning biology project to Mrs. Lackey.

JUNIOR

No longer the greenhorns of the school but then not yet the upperclassmen, the junior class enters a year filled with hard work and numerous social activities. At last eligible for several selective clubs, such as Hi-Y and Tri-Hi-Y, F.T.A., Quill and Scroll, and Beta Club, these busy students can be seen scurrying around, attending to the duties for which they are responsible.

Another place the juniors begin to inhabit frequently is the public library. When research paper time rolls around, or a U. S. History project is assigned, most of the students are recognized only by the tops of their heads, peeking from behind a stack of encyclopedias and reference books. However, plenty of time is left for school sponsored activities, such as the much awaited Junior-Senior, an event highlighting the whole Junior year. Weeks are spent planning and decorating for this fabulous occasion.

"Junior homerooms have problems, too," brings out Mary Ruth in a Homeroom Representative meeting.

The three bears, Goldilocks, and the big, bad wolf pictured here are really well-known members of the Junior Class.

Members of the junior class are shown getting down to brass tacks in working on their research papers.

This young football king and queen are part of the junior class float predicting the victory of the H.H.S. Tornadoes in the Homecoming game.

O R S

Early in the year all thoughts turn to the decorating of the junior class float. This year, after the students' careful planning and hard work, the theme "Arch of Triumph" was presented first prize.

Another occasion exclusive to the junior class is its annual play. Amateur actors feel a wave of pride as the loud applause indicates their long hours of practice have not been in vain.

A chance to travel and improve European-

American relations has been offered junior students in the form of the American Field Service Scholarship. Each year a number of students compete for this honor, being required to pass the approval of public spirited citizens. The names of the finalists are sent to the American Field Service, from which two are selected to represent the school.

Having closed a busy and exciting year, the juniors are still able to look into the even brighter future.

Juniors Eddie Faires, Larry Grubb, and Paul Fox struggle with 19th Century authors for their first research paper.

Their smiles show that these juniors—Bunny Shuford, Hannah Abernethy, Tommy Bolch, and Brent Drum—have been chosen as the American Field Service Scholarship finalists.

Bewildered sophomores stumble through the hall trying to register for classes.

Paul Swing shares his knowledge of insects with a parent at open house.

"Hey, kid! You're on the wrong stairs," is a typical remark which reaches the ears of the bewildered sophomores, struggling to adapt themselves to their new surroundings. However, they find most of their upperclassmen quite friendly, and gradually the contagious school spirit of Hickory High School begins to make itself felt.

Little does it ever occur to these underclassmen that they will have to spend late hours tramping futilely around the woods, searching for a choice biological specimen, or burn the midnight oil delving into the theorems and axioms of geometry. At first, physical education seems only to bring aching muscles, and cramped minds can't seem to find room for the progressive tense. But, as always, hard work brings its rewards and a feeling of pride, as the Pythagorean theorem at last becomes clear and those little lines under the microscope turn into amoeba.

Gary Pitts and Bill Carpenter seem intrigued by the intricate geometrical structures displayed in Miss Shore's room.

Not wanting to lose a single point in a volley ball game during physical education, sophomores do their best to hit the ball.

M O R E S

Spirited class elections bring the first taste of the self reliant atmosphere of the school. Enthusiastic campaign managers fill the school with posters and slogans exalting their candidates. The auditorium rings with campaign speeches and cheers. At last the best man wins and the sophomores have chosen their representatives for the coming year.

Perhaps the first duty of these officers is to organize committees and ideas for the sophomore Homecoming float, this year featuring a Queen of Hearts shouting, "Off with their heads!"

New faces begin to appear on the H.H.S. athletic teams as hard-working sophomores find berths on the varsity and junior varsity squads.

Adapting and making friends, studying hard, conducting their own class government, participating in sports and new activities, all add up to a full year and a large measure of a spirit that builds and builds.

Sophomore Steve Riley, seated at a shiny new desk in the new biology lab, questions Mrs. Lackey about an assignment.

"All play and no work" seems to be the general theme of this sophomore health class.

OUR AC

Working closely with the school, these activity groups help to maintain high standards within the school as well as in the whole city. They instill in the student body a desire to do better, to strive for their set goals, to succeed in whatever their aim may be. During school hours a hum of laughter, the scratch of pencils on paper, orders given and carried out, and typewriters pounding away, or meetings called to decide some matter of schoolwide importance—this hum is heard. Even after school these same sounds may be heard as deadlines must be met, last minute practices are held, or programs are set up. These clubs constitute a group of activities which are carried on throughout the year within the school. The students who participate in these activities give up a study hall to take part in these groups.

The publication of the Loc and Twig, the government of the student body, the job of ushering for graduation and baccalaureate, the work of representing the P.T.A. and Student Council in the home rooms, and the making of music with voice and instrument are the many varied functions of these groups. Much spirit and hard work are generated by the members who are associated with these activities. They work hard, yet also find time to enjoy the activity in group fun. In the lulls of work these students gain valuable knowledge in the ways of other people and they learn how to live a fuller life.

An Example of Democratic Living

STUDENT COUNCIL

Using lively sales talk, Hilda Adams, Nancy Pridmore, and William Abernethy try to persuade Wolfgang Friedemann and Charles Miller to buy a football program.

Leading our school under democratic standards, the Student Council is constantly working to improve relationships between student groups and faculty. They add to school morale by being on hand for all football games and selling programs. They also feed each player after every game. New students find friendship and a warm welcome, as Student Council members enroll them and introduce them to the faculty and students. An annual undertaking of the Student Council is to visit other schools so that they can get new ideas on student government.

The Go-Betweens That Really Count

HOME ROOM REPRESENTATIVES

"Hello, Mrs. Jones. Why didn't George come to school today?" This is a question often asked by the Home Room Representative whose morning duty it is to call those students who are absent from school. This greatly helps the office in keeping the necessary records of attendance. They also make up the lower house of duty to represent their individual homerooms, from which they are chosen, and to bring to the Council's attention any matter which they consider important. The Homeroom Representatives serve as a direct tie between the students and the Student Council.

Mrs. Ben Quinn and Home Room Representative Joe Norwood check pupils' attendance at the beginning of the first period each morning.

LOG STAFF

Harriet Hafer, Loretta Duncan, and Anita Huffman work on some Log write-ups to meet that all-important deadline.

Starting the year by selecting the colors for the annual, the dedicatee, and the theme, the Loc staff begins a year of planning and working together. Making out schedules, helping the photographer with class pictures, and struggling to get the write-ups finished before that all-important deadline, the Loggers work continuously to present to the students of Hickory High a full account of student life. Captions are written and statistics are typed, and at last the dummy is ready. Later the Loggers have the thrill of presenting to the student body, the Hickory High School Loc.

Banking the ad money for the day, Log business staffers Mary Ann Lackey and Libbie Whitley make out a deposit slip.

At the beginning of school the Loc Business Staff sets right to work. Their responsibility is to reach the high goal of advertisements in order to finance a better Loc. This enthusiastic proletariat co-operate in selling advertisements, collecting finances for class and club pictures and selling the Loc subscriptions. They industriously type out bills, lay out the final advertisements for the dummy copy, and write the original ad copy as the deadline approaches. In spring the Business Staff shares the pride of presenting to the students of Hickory High School a more progressive account of the year's activities.

Interpretation of Student Life

TWIG STAFF

With a beaming smile June Radcliffe receives the first place trophy for the best school newspaper in Western North Carolina at the Cullowhee convention.

Pressure to make that last minute deadline, stumbling out of a dark building after a hectic "makeup" session, listening to the criticism of the editor or advisor, all these are the trials endured by most Twig Staff members. Named last year as the top high school newspaper in the state, the Twig inspires its members to maintain the tradition by writing and interpreting Hickory High School news to the best of their ability. But even though there is a constant "journalistic pressure" on the members, they seem to enjoy their work immensely.

*Twig business staff members Peggy Ennis and Nelda Wright fold copies of the Twig to be sent as exchange papers.*

Without the capable and helping hand of the Twig Business Staff our school paper, and all the outstanding activities connected with it, could not exist. Contracting the many new businesses which are constantly coming to Hickory keeps the Twig Business Staff on its toes. By being alert to this increased growth, the Twig has been able to produce an eight and ten-page paper. In addition to selling ads to the new and established concerns the Twig members must lay out ads, collect and send bills, fold the papers, send exchange papers, publicize the Twig, and then, most important, distribute the Twig to the students.

A Vital Part of Graduation

JUNIOR MARSHALS

Chief Marshals Camille Hendrix and David Keck appear solemn before leading 1954's graduating class.

"Where would you like to sit?" That is a familiar question asked by the Junior members of the Beta Club, known as the Junior Marshals. Each spring a group of juniors is chosen on the basis of their characteristics of leadership, as well as their scholastic accomplishments. These honored students usher at the commencement exercises, Senior Play, and Baccalaureate Sermon. The group elects two chief marshals to escort the seniors in the processions and recessions included in the exercises.

These two work with the senior class officers and advisers to plan the graduation exercises.

We Unite Home and School

P.T.A. REPRESENTATIVES

Working with their parents and school faculty, the P.T.A. representatives serve to benefit their school and surrounding community. By supporting projects and faithfully attending all P.T.A. meetings, these representatives thus improve school facilities and relationships. Every student representative is responsible for collecting membership dues for the P.T.A. Through their efforts in this drive, more members join the association each year. Many home-rooms, by being encouraged and led by their representatives, have obtained a two hundred per cent membership. The important work of the representatives is a bind between students, parents, and teachers, which leads to better understanding and fellowship.

BAND

"I wish I was in the land of cotton,
Old times there are not forgotten,
Look away, look away, look away,
Dixie Land!"

When the Hickory High School band plays Dixie, every loyal H.H.S. student rises to his feet in tribute to the memory of the Confederacy. The Hickory High School Band ably does its part in boosting school spirit at H.H.S. through pep meetings. A Hickory High football game never seems complete until the band performs at the half-time. The lively marches and school pep songs seem to spur our athletes to victory and our cheering section to greater enthusiasm. By participating in homecoming parades—Hickory High School, Lenoir Rhyne College, and Appalachian State Teachers College—the band further exhibits its marching skills. The main project of this year's band was to sponsor the performance of the U. S. Marine Band in Hickory.

"Now let's try that one again and follow my directions," says director Landon Walker as the chorus practices for the annual musical festivals.

The Hickory High Chorus members are hard at work preparing for the Christmas presentation of the "Messiah."

For entertaining as well as for education, the chorus performs various musical programs both in the school and outside. They entertain for civic groups in Hickory, performing in Christmas programs, festivals in Boone and Greensboro, and participating in various other programs. One of the most important projects of the chorus is to sing for the Baccalaureate Sermon and the commencement exercises at graduation.

During the Christmas season, members of the chorus serenade the school.

Camille Hendrix, chorus accompanist, strikes a chord to get the songsters started on the right note.

OUR

Through working and playing together we learn to know about each other, help each other, guide each other. Students mix and are drawn into a closer fellowship, building strong unity among student, school, church, and community. These organizations thrive on student support and in return help build better citizens for community life. This group of clubs encourages better journalists, trains teachers, librarians, and better drivers, teaches students occupations in manual and distributive fields, instills in them high ideals for good scholastic standing, and encourages student interest in foreign countries and their languages. Consisting only of clubs which are associated with and sponsored by Hickory High School, these groups sponsor projects to advance our school.

CLUBS

Several other clubs made up of Hickory High students are sponsored outside of the school by civic and community organizations. These clubs are the Alpha, Beta, Delta, Junior, and Senior Y clubs, which are sponsored by the YMCA and YWCA of Charlotte, and the Key Club, which is the lower branch of the Kiwanis Club of Hickory. Many projects of civic value are carried on by these groups, some of which help to make Hickory a cleaner, safer, and better town in which to live. Building a student's character, developing his possibilities, training him to work and live as a better person, and teaching him a more wholesome way of life are but a few of the aims of these clubs. Fellowship, friends to share laughter and advise and guide over the rough spots can be found in these clubs. Each club has a purpose—something to offer its members, something to unite them.

Learning for the future

FUTURE TEACHERS OF AMERICA

By challenging its members to active service through high standards, the F.T.A. Club is able to accomplish such beneficial projects as helping with American Education Week, serving at the information desk, and substitute teaching. Through these activities the students gain valuable experience for their future vocation. At the end of the year the most outstanding boy and girl are named "Mr. and Miss Future Teacher."

A visiting mother and daughter receive an explanation of a history project from practice teacher Mike Amendola, as their F.T.A. guide, Loretta Duncan, looks on.

Mr. Bruton checks Roy Dellinger's daily report of what he is doing on the job.

Consisting of mature boys and girls seeking to become skilled in an industrial trade, the D.O. Club strives to further the interests and aims of the Diversified Occupations program through constructive projects. Although the boys and girls work hard at their jobs, fun is mixed in the activities, too, by their holding socials and meetings.

Featuring a giant gilded rat trap with the theme, "Trap the Rat'ers," the organization's homecoming float will long be remembered as a deserving prize winner.

To enable the students' employers to understand more clearly the principles and actual functions of the program, a "Bosses' Banquet" is held annually.

A link between school and community—this is the Distributive Education Club of Hickory High. Under the direction of Dan Hoyle, D.E. instructor, the club seeks to "learn by doing."

The D.E. Club is composed of those students who are participating in the Distributive Education program. By spending hours in study as well as on the job, D.E. Club members achieve their purpose of preparing themselves for future occupations. Through the cooperation of local merchants, students obtain jobs in department stores, grocery stores, and filling stations.

The main project of this year's club is the sponsoring of the Convention of the Western N. C. District of D.E. Clubs at Hickory this fall.

Opening our eyes to a foreign land

FRENCH CLUB

Students gather around the foreign exchange students, who are eager to answer questions about their homeland.

The American Field Service is a familiar phrase at Hickory High because of the work of the French Club. Students have had the opportunity to meet foreign students from Europe and Asia. The club has engaged in several money-making projects, such as making and selling Christmas decorations and selling potato chips. Glitter and scraps of satin lying around mean that the club members have been busy making the crown and throne of the Homecoming Queen.

What we will—we can BETA CLUB

The Beta Club is an organization which seeks to cultivate the ideals of service, honesty, and proper leadership in our citizens of tomorrow. It is an honor society for those students whose high school work and achievements are outstanding.

This organization encourages the student to do his best academically and morally. The Beta Club annually sponsors one of the school's biggest and most worthy projects, the March of Dimes drive. Beta members solicit contributions both in the school and the community.

Don Whitley, president, explains to Beta Club members the fine points of conducting the March of Dimes campaign.

'It's all in a day's work,' say library assistants Tommy Bruner, Dean Brittain, and Steve Small, as they check out a book for Floyd Crawley.

By acting as assistants to Mrs. Matthews, the members of the Library Club relieve the librarian of many small duties she would otherwise have to perform. By checking books in and out, shelving the books, and handling the permits, the library assistants provide a way for the librarian to spend more time helping the students. Besides helping others, the library assistants also help themselves. In the meetings the members learn the history of library classification and how to classify and mark books correctly.

The projects of the Library Club this year are sponsoring a tea for the faculty and attending the North Carolina High School Library Convention in Charlotte.

Driving nearly 6,000 miles a month, our bus drivers safely carry 1,200 Hickory High, Hickory Junior High, and Hickory elementary school students to and from school daily. After taking a six weeks' training course, the drivers are fully prepared to carry this responsibility. A refresher course is taken later in the year. Each driver gives three hours of his time a day to transport students. Every twenty school days the drivers are required to make detailed bus reports. This takes five hours. Other than their regular duties the bus drivers participate in extracurricular activities such as panel discussions and safety programs.

Under able leadership, the junior members of the Tri-Hi-Y sponsor Christmas festivities for the underprivileged children of the primary grades of the city school. Members also enter the holiday spirit during their own Christmas party, climaxing an evening of caroling.

At Eastertide the lawns of Hickory High are filled with gay shouts as underprivileged colored children discover the brightly painted eggs at the Easter egg hunt. During this same season a special Easter program is given for the entire student body.

Members of this group as well as the other Y members give morning devotions.

The student body at H.H.S. will not soon forget the vivid portrayal of the birth of Christ put on by the members of the Senior Hi-Y and Tri-Hi-Y Clubs. This program is given each year by the senior clubs for the benefit of the P.T.A. and the high school students.

The Christmas and Easter parties are two other projects carried on each year by the five Y clubs. The Senior Hi-Y members help to decorate a room for the party and to buy presents for the less fortunate children who are invited to attend.

Making up a vital part of the spirit of H.H.S. is the Christian organization for senior girls—the Alpha Tri-Hi-Y. Junior girls who are members of the Beta and Delta clubs enter the Alpha Tri-Hi-Y when they become seniors, if they are eligible. The main project of the club this year is to clean and maintain the cleanliness of the First Aid room. Other activities include pre-school devotions before the Thanksgiving holidays, morning devotions over the public address system, and the Christmas play presentation. Working with the Y Council, the other four Y clubs, and Miss Usrey, adviser, the group plans and gives parties for needy children.

Ann Stine, Ann White, and Beverly Gibbs industriously clean the First Aid room.

JUNIOR HI-Y

Coach Jim Garrett helps Eddie Faires and Pete Panther check a financial report for Junior Hi-Y.

This club is composed of Junior boys who are dedicated to create, maintain, and extend throughout the home, school, and community better understanding of Christian character.

These "Y" men also contribute generously of their time and organizational ability to make the annual Christmas party for less fortunate children a success. Each homeroom throughout the school participates in this holiday activity by sponsoring at least one child to whom they play Santa Claus.

KEY CLUB

By acting as a connecting link between the school and the community, the Key Club has done its share in promoting good will. The club has tried to present some article of value to the school each year. This year the members have been using their salesmanship abilities to vend ceramic ashtrays. With the money realized from these sales the junior Kiwanians hope to purchase something to benefit the student body.

Taking up money from the sale of Ralph Flanagan dance tickets, Key Clubber Tommy Henderson finds that the campaign has been quite successful.

JANITORS

Albert and Arthur ride on the activity bus with George, who drives the students on trips.

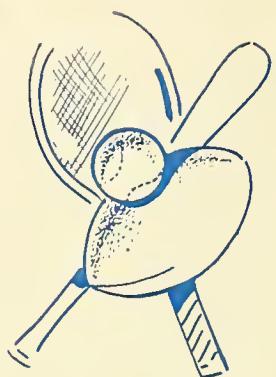

The loyal men who help to keep Hickory High School presentable are the janitors, George Finger, Arthur Mackie, Albert Reed, and Garfield Saddler. Throughout the year they keep the buildings warm, comfortable, and clean.

This year the new buildings will add more ground to cover and more hours of faithful service; still they will serve in their able capacities to keep ever ahead of their numerous duties. An extra duty, George's daily "You are dismissed for lunch" is welcomed music.

We're gonna win

The entire school year is enlivened and highlighted by athletic contests. From the first football game in the fall until the last baseball contest in the spring, the feeling of loyalty and the spirit of competition knit together the Hickory High student body. In the annual Homecoming festivities, for example, every student is involved —as player, band member, cheerleader, program seller, sponsor, float constructor, or parade participant.

Hickory High School has managed to carry on an extensive sports program in which the participating number has been tremendous. The coaches have been the important factors in the athletic program's success. Through the physical education classes the students are taught the basic principles.

this game tonight.

From these classes develop our year's main sports: football in the fall, basketball in winter, and baseball, tennis, and track during the spring.

In the school's favorite sport, football, Coach Frank Barger has put together a fine group of hard-working boys to produce the best record in years: 6-3-1. Two of these players have been named All-Conference and several landed berths on All-State Honorable Mention.

Cheerleaders take time off from the crowd and cheering to please the photographer.

Each game during the basketball season has its great moments. Never to be forgotten are Watts' 37 points in one game.

Coach Washam's baseball roster lists hard-hitting players who help to capture runner-up position. Tennis, a relatively new sport, is not yet strong enough to produce a winning team. Winning, however, is a Hickory tradition.

Coaches Miller and Barger intently watch a Tornado offensive maneuver.

"Let's Go, Hickory" — and really yell it!

CHEERLEADERS

"Who's got the pep?" is only one of the familiar cries of the H.H.S. cheerleaders. They are always on hand for the games, cheering our team on to victory. They also lead students in pre-game pep rallies. The cheerleaders spend many hours practicing the old cheers and dreaming up new ones. They also invest valuable time making banners to sell at games to mark the rooting section. They strengthen the loyalty ties of H.H.S. students.

Hickory opened a very successful gridiron season with an easy 21-0 win over Shelby. Captain Thad Lineberger scored two touchdowns, and Carroll Bolick added the other. Harold Bolick made all three conversion attempts.

Hickory defeated Newton-Conover in its first conference battle, 13-6. Lineberger scored the Tornadoes' first touchdown, with fullback Robert Petree adding the other. Wilkes Central gave Hickory its first loss of the season, blanking the Tornadoes 20-0.

With 37 seconds remaining in the game Bolick scored to give Hickory a 20-20 tie with Lenoir. Wilson Martin scored on a pass from Bolick, who hit pay dirt twice.

Marion was the Tornadoes' next victim, bowing by 21-13. Bolick passed to David Craft for one score and made another on a one-yard plunge. Martin added the other. Capitalizing on a fumble to tally their first touchdown, Hickory went on to defeat Morganton 20-7. A Bolick-to-Craft pass paid off for six, and an interception by Henderson set up a touchdown by Lineberger. J. C. Saunders stood out defensively.

Fullback Robert Petree surges forward, as he picks up that necessary yardage for Hickory.

Hickory's defense shines, for the opposition has a hard time finding a hole through which to gain.

With the aid of Jake Mullis's downfield blocking, Hickory emerged victorious, 20-12, in the big Homecoming game with Belmont. Martin scored twice, and fullback Petree plunged over for the other score.

The Tornadoes displayed offensive power as they humbled the Taylorsville Bears, 41-7. Petree scored twice on runs of 71 and 68 yards. Craft recovered a fumble in the enemy end zone for another tally. Bolick scored two touchdowns on fine runs of 24 and 50 yards. Martin added the final six. Bolch kicked five straight extra points.

Although outgained in total yardage, Harding of Charlotte dealt the Tornadoes a heartbreaking 13-7 defeat. Hickory was on the Ram nine-yard line with 42 seconds to go in the game, but lost the ball on downs. David Dale helped stop Harding's running attack.

In their final game Hickory lost to Valdese, 20-13, on a pass play with only 25 second left in the game. The H.H.S. defensive team had played a fine game until this fatal play. Martin made one of the season's best runs for the first tally, and Bolick sneaked for the other score, which capped Hickory's best football season in years.

Taking a heavy workout are Buddy Burcham, J. C. Saunders, William Reese, and Harold Bolch.

Hickory High's 1955-56 basketball team completed a successful Western AA season in third place in the conference. In a close race with Lenoir and Valdese, the Tornadoes were defeated by the Lenoir team in their next-to-last game of the season on the Community Center courts, 77-65, to eliminate the chance of a tie between the two teams.

Captain William Watts led the Tornadoes' scoring for the season. David Craft finished second in total number of points.

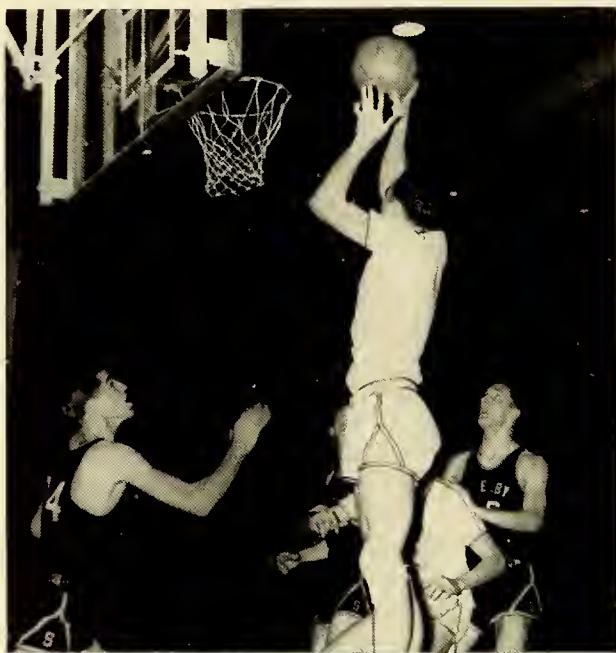

Coach Gene Miller's Tornadoes played in the annual Holiday Tournament held in Taylorsville and captured the championship as they defeated teams from Newton, Hudson, and Taylorsville. Captain Watts again led the scoring for the Hickory team in the tournament. The other four members of Hickory's starting five, forwards Harold Bolch and David Craft and guards Jimmy Belk and Floyd Crawley, contributed their share to the three victories. Jerry Phillips and Carroll Bolick were starters in some of the Tornadoes' games.

In their first game of the season, Hickory High's Red Tornadoes defeated Hardin High of Charlotte in a close battle 56-52. Harold Bolch led the scoring with 11 points. Bolch was again top scorer with 18 points as Hickory defeated Shelby 50-37. Captain Watts had 18 points for the night in a second triumph over Shelby, 53-27. The Tornadoes were victorious in their next six games as they defeated Hudson twice, 50-22 and 81-42, and Taylorsville twice, 57-55 and 73-50, and gained two important Western AA conference victories over Marion, 77-58, and Newton, 56-47. Watts led the scoring in five of the six games as he hit for 21 and 19 points against Hudson, 31 against Marion, and 19 in each game with Taylorsville. Carroll Bolick poured 14 points through the nets against Newton. The Tornadoes did not taste defeat until their tenth game of the season, when disaster struck and they bowed, 72-58, to a strong Valdese team. Watts, with 19 points, led the scoring in a losing cause, which helped place Valdese in second place ahead of the Red Tornadoes in the conference standings.

Hickory took its second win of the season over Harding by defeating them in Charlotte 79-61, with Captain Watts again leading the scoring with 20 points. In a close battle with Wilkes-Central the Tornadoes emerged victorious 44-36. Craft was high scorer as Hickory defeated Newton 62-54 and Morganton 86-36. Craft made 20 points against Newton and 24 against Morganton. Watts set a new scoring record of 37 points in a great Hickory win over Lenoir, 62-61. He made his last two-pointer with just a few seconds left to enable the Tornadoes to triumph in overtime. Hickory ran roughshod over Hudson in their next game 89-39, as Bolch scored 20 points. Craft tallied his season high of 25 points against Marion as Hickory won 65-46. The Tornadoes absorbed their second loss at the hands of Wilkes-Central, 47-46. Hickory defeated Newton again 59-55, but in their next outing lost to Valdese 74-72. Morganton was the Tornadoes' eighteenth victim of the season, 93-42. The 93 points scored set a new school record. The cagers closed the season by defeating Taylorsville 57-51.

The girls lost the chance of a tie with Taylorsville in the last game of the season. Their only other loss was at the hands of Taylorsville earlier in the season.

Forwards Doris Little, Doris Wright, Nancy Spry, and Christine Gibson did the heaviest part of the scoring, with Doris Wright taking individual honors.

Outstanding starting guards were Carolyn Herman, Mona Hudson, Nadine Bumgarner, and Sylvia Settemyre. These girls were instrumental in the wins as they kept the opposing team's scoring low. The girls compiled a total of 828 points in 14 games as compared to 506 for the opposition.

Hickory High's baseball team completed the 1955 season with a fine record of nine wins against five losses. The Red Tornadoes, under Coach Troy Washam, finished second place in the Western Conference standings. David Craft, Bob Helton, and William Watts were All-Conference selections.

First baseman Craft was the leading hitter at .420.

Captain Helton, regular shortstop for three years, was chosen to play in the Greensboro All-Star game.

Watts, centerfielder, has been producing timely base hits for two seasons.

The team received valuable aid from a potent mound staff. A trio of hurlers, Harold Bolch, Charles Yount and Larry Sherrill, were very effective.

Hickory opened the season with a 7-6 loss to Charlotte Harding. Harding is a potential AAA team, and although the tilt was a non-conference battle, the Tornadoes showed that they had the ability to compete with a much larger school.

Familiar to all HHS students are the ever-smiling face and distinguishing haircut of Wolfgang Friedemann, this year's American Field Service exchange student. Taking a year off from his studies in Flensburg, Germany, Wolfgang has come here to learn how the average American teen-ager lives. During the year his duty is to give speeches to various groups, telling of his native country and way of life. Wolfgang takes his place in the regular activities of HHS, and students are proud of his winning the county Voice of Democracy Contest. His stay in America is sponsored by the French Club and financed by the Ivey Foundation. His American home is with the Bryon Wilfongs.
